FARMERS NEEDED FOR RESEARCH PROJECT

We want to know your thoughts about climate change and climate variability

This research project will examine older male farmers' perceptions of climate change and climate variation.

The researcher is keen to get the experiences of individuals who are most affected in their day-to-day lives by climate change and/or climate variation.

It is expected that this research will be published in academic journals upon completion so it is really important to get a real sense of what being a farmer is like in the Central West and Central Tablelands areas. Farmers willing to be interviewed do not have to be currently farming but can be retired given restrictions in age requirements.

If you are a farmer that fits the criteria and are happy to speak with the researcher for about an hour, please contact Natalie on 0422 586 393 or at: natalie.single@gmail.com.

All interviews and information will remain private and confidential.

This study is a part of a student research project.

BOOK TO HELP BOOST ON-FARM BIODIVERSITY

Conserving and enhancing native biodiversity on farms brings many benefits as well as providing many challenges. Nature and Farming, co-written by University of New England professor Nick Reid, explains why it is important to sustain native plants and animals in agricultural landscapes, and outlines the key issues in developing and implementing practical approaches to safeguarding native biodiversity in rural areas.

The book considers the range of ecological and agricultural issues that determine what native biodiversity occurs in farmland and how it can be secured.

NATIONAL TREE DAY

National Tree Day and Schools Tree Day provide all Australians with an opportunity to do something positive for the environment and reconnect with nature, thanks to support from our longstanding major sponsor Toyota Australia. Hundreds of thousands of Australians planted over 1 million native trees, shrubs and grasses at more than 3300 Tree Day events in 2012.

We work with councils, schools and community groups to make it all happen.

In 2013, National Tree Day will be on Sunday 28th July and Schools Tree Day will be on Friday 26th July, although events can be held on any date during the year.
